Abiraterone acetate (Zytiga) is a highly potent inhibitor of testosterone production by the adrenal gland. In a phase II trial conducted in patients with castration-resistant prostate cancer (CRPC) progressing after docetaxel (Taxotere), abiraterone acetate plus prednisone significantly improved overall survival (OS) in responders after a median follow-up of 21.9 months (primary endpoint). The present study examined survival and toxicity in both responder and nonresponder groups, with a focus on (i) the appropriateness of the continuous-treatment criterion, and (ii) a comparison between the two groups. A total of 224 patients were assigned to receive abiraterone acetate (1000 mg/day) and prednisone (5 mg/day) every day versus docetaxel (60 mg/m²) every 21 days, stratified by predefined progression-free survival (PFS; ≤4 vs. >4 months) and radiologic response to docetaxel (good vs. poor). Progression-free survival was significantly greater in the abiraterone acetate plus prednisone-treated group than in the docetaxel group (median [range] 15.3 [0-107.6] vs. 6.6 [0-91.8] months).
